Yes, very convenient for providing info to a police state apparatus:

Twitter: every opinion you've ever made public

Facebook: billions of photographs for facial identity

Yes. We're all the products that Big Tech sells to advertisers and government collectors of citizen information.

The worst part, all of us agreed to this situation when we decided to submit to their TOS, so no room to complain about it. 😊

Yes, me too. However, I enjoy commenting on political issues on a wide range of YouTube channels.

It's pathetic how many Americans say they don't mind being spied upon by the government or Tech because they never do anything wrong.

That's just way wrong on so many levels. 😊 🇺🇸

Yes, that's true, and inexplicably, YouTube just last week decided to eliminate maintaining a running total of downvotes. You can hit the downvote button but have no idea how many others disliked the content. Talk about manipulation and deceit. 😏

Facebook Admits "made a mistake" Censoring hydroxychloroquine saves lives.
Facebook just announced it "made a mistake" when it censored studies showing hydroxychloroquine saves lives.
Dr. Simone Gold on Twitter: Facebook just announced it "made a mistake" when it censored studies showing HCQ saves lives. Censorship is never "a mistake." Tech executives repeatedly made a calculated decision, month after month, silencing physicians worldwide.
This comes as news of a study released by Hackensack Meridian Health of NJ Hydroxychloroquine says that the drug use shows a lower rate of hospitalization compared to those not treated.
